NOTES

Religion Journals

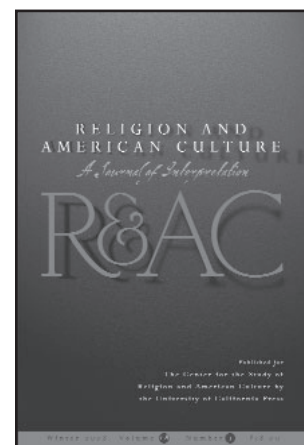

Nova Religio

Now published online and in print four times a year, Nova Religio presents comprehensive interpretations and examinations of alternative religious movements. Original research, literature reviews, and conference updates keep religious studies scholars, sociologists, anthropologists, and historians up to date and well informed on a wide range of topics. Nova Religio is interdisciplinary and cross-cultural in scope.

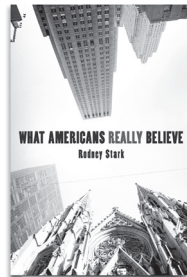

Religion and American Culture

Religion and American Culture is devoted to promoting the ongoing scholarly discussion of the nature, terms, and dynamics of religion in America. Embracing a diversity of methodological approaches and theoretical perspectives this semiannual publication explores the interplay between religion and other spheres of American culture.

THEOLOGY AND SCIENCE

The Journal of The Center for Theology and the Natural Sciences (CTNS)

Theology and Science publishes critically reviewed articles that promote the creative mutual interaction between the natural sciences and theology. While the journal assumes the integrity of each domain, its primary aim is to explore this interaction in terms of the implications of the natural sciences for constructive research in philosophical and systematic theology, the philosophical and theological elements within and underlying theoretical research in the natural sciences, and the relations and interactions between theological and scientific methodologies.

CALL FOR AUTHORS

The Edwin Mellen Press publishes books intended to be read by scholars, not books intended for students or for the general reading public.

Mellen titles constitute the core of every research collection. Each one is acquired by libraries worldwide and is read by over 10,000 scholars.

The number of Mellen titles in representative research libraries is ...

London	4,926	Harvard	4,731
Munich	4,498	Toronto	3,940
Berlin	4,388	Columbia	3,551
Paris	3,968	Yale	3,305
Zurich	2,645	California	2,850
Oxford	2,621	Princeton	2,690

Because Mellen titles are purchased by so many research libraries, the press neither needs nor accepts any financial subsidies. Therefore, Mellen's sole criterion for publication is that a manuscript make a significant contribution to scholarship.

The Edwin Mellen Press responds to all inquiries promptly and it peer reviews all manuscripts within 45 days. We invite simultaneous submissions so that authors may compare our evaluative process and contractual terms with our competitors'.

The Edwin Mellen Press publishes monographs, primary sources, collections, translations, bibliographies, concordances, dictionaries, and reference works. We also publish dissertations that are recommended by their examining committees.

(For a complete list of our publications visit www.mellenpress.com).

For a prompt and personal response,

The Asian American Experience

"A treat for those exploring the landscape of Korean American spiritual experience. The book offers religious angles on such social issues as gender and patriarchy, marriage and singlehood, family practices, and generational change, as well as such more usual concerns as theology, worship, and church practice."—Paul Spickard, author of Is Lighter Better?: Skin-Tone Discrimination among Asian Americans

Society for the Scientific Study of Religion

CALL FOR PAPERS

Annual Meeting
October 23-25, 2009
Westin Tabor Center
Denver, Colorado

Discoveries in the Scientific Study of Religion

This is an exciting and productive time for the scientific study of religion. Researchers are studying an ever changing religious landscape using new concepts and theoretical ideas, sharper analytical tools, and increasingly rich, sophisticated, and accessible quantitative and qualitative data. Discoveries abound.

Proposals for sessions and papers on any topic in the scientific study of religion are welcome. We particularly invite proposals for sessions and papers that present discoveries. We hope to showcase many different types of discoveries, including but not limited to new evidence bearing on important questions and debates in the scientific study of religion, new observations of emerging or established religious movements or institutions, innovative conceptualizations, and advances in methodology. Discoveries might emerge from experiments, computer simulations, or the analysis of written or oral narratives. They might be based on historical or ethnographic investigation of a single case or analysis of large data sets. Proposals are welcome from researchers pursuing the scientific study of religion using these or other methods, and from scholars based in any discipline.

All session and paper proposals must be submitted via the on-line submission system that will be available on the SSSR's web site beginning January 15, 2009. After that date, please go to www.sssrweb.org and follow the links to the submission pages. In addition to the first author's full contact information, paper proposals require abstracts of not more than 150 words that succinctly describe the question(s) motivating the research, the data and methods used, and what the paper contributes or expects to contribute to our knowledge or understanding of religion. The submission deadline is April 15, 2009.

Please direct questions to:

RELIGIOUS RESEARCH ASSOCIATION

CALL FOR PAPERS

2009 Annual Meeting, Denver, Colorado

Religion and Relations: Linking Faith with Marriage and the Family

Major changes in marriages and families characterize the last several decades in the United States and many other societies, including increasing ages at marriage, higher divorce rates, better and more widely available contraceptives, widespread cohabitation, more married women and mothers in the labor force, smaller family sizes, more childbearing outside of marriage, and more openness toward and acceptance of same-sex relationships. Because faith and family are often intertwined, these changes have profoundly affected religious institutions and, in turn, been affected by them. As traditional norms regarding marriage and childbearing have come under threat by the conflicting behaviors of individuals, various denominational and societal struggles have ensued, most notably over abortion and same-sex marriage. At the same time, individuals have had to reconcile their own beliefs with the changing behaviors of others—and in many cases, of themselves—in the context of the larger religious debates on the same subjects. Careful study of these and other links between faith and family issues is critical for understanding the current religious landscape and how it came to be.

To that end, we solicit proposals for sessions and papers that examine in some way the connections between religion and families, living arrangements, marriage, childbearing, or related topics. Examples of possible questions or issues to address include:

- Religious involvement across the family life cycle
- Religion and marital stability
- Religious intermarriage
- Congregational variations in family types or household arrangements
- Childhood religious socialization and childrearing practices
- Continuity of religious beliefs/behavior across generations
- Changing denominational and individual views on family-related issues
- Childbearing patterns across religious groups
- Low fertility and the mainline decline
- Differential childbearing and changing religious composition
- Religion and views on contraception and abortion
- Institutionalized celibacy and the disappearance of the Shakers: cause and effect?
- Living arrangements and religious participation
- Denominational struggles with gay and lesbian issues
- Alternative family arrangements in new religious movements

As always, we welcome papers and sessions on all topics of a practical or theoretical nature relating to religion, especially (but not limited to) organized religions, denominations, and congregations. However, this year we particularly encourage sessions, papers, and panels that touch in some way on questions that link religion to marriage, the family, or living arrangements.

Send all proposals by email to:

Jack Marcum, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), jack.marcum@pcusa.org.

Include email addresses and affiliations of all participants/authors on proposals.

For papers, submit an abstract of 150 words or less.

Submissions open: January 15, 2009

Submissions close: April 15, 2009

Completed papers to discussants: September 30, 2008
